

Portability of wireless numbers among carriers is vital. Many individuals use this number on stationery and advertising. Others use these numbers as primary home contacts. Not implementing portability is anti-consumer, contrary to what the carriers claim. If it isn't of value, then why is it done for wired lines?